

RIOT SQUAD OXFORD

Monday 26th November (8th Week)
St Hugh's College

Join us for an evening exploring a thought-provoking multi-media exhibition which – while celebrating women and non-binary people of colour at Oxford – addresses the issues they face and opens the door to more fruitful and nuanced conversations about race, gender, Higher Education and diversity.

5.30pm: Drinks reception and private view

5.45–7.00pm: Panel discussion chaired by the Tutor for Equality

The exhibition is open to all on weekdays from 9am–5pm until February
Enquiries: outreach@st-hughs.ox.ac.uk

Riot Squad

St Hugh's College is proud to host Riot Squad, a project dedicated to highlighting the agency, individuality and power of women and non-binary people of colour at the University of Oxford. It is an initiative led by a group of Oxford students in partnership with photographers and artists from Royal College of Art, London.

As part of this campaign, a range of students who identify as women and non-binary people of colour at the University were invited to take part in a photoshoot, with the vision of sharing their narratives and carving their spaces at Oxford. This exhibition of photography, videography, and painting is the culmination of the project.

Using art as a vehicle, this initiative aims to prompt reflections on intersectionality, normativity, image and identity.
